

The Federal Communications Commission

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I do not want to pay more for my telephone service! I use my phone for the purpose of having a means to contact anyone in the case of my car breaking down in bad weather or along a lone highway. I hardly use it any other time than for that purpose. I don't want to lose these benefits so that big businesses can pay less than their fair share.

Why should people who live in residential areas pay the same price as business that make at least five times the calls. Having a phone in the home is a necessity in the case of emergencies and leisure and it certainly won't benefit people who use it rarely.

Keep the USF Fair!

Sincerely,

Nellie Batz
